Invertis University's esteemed cultural club, "Rock On," organized a month-long virtual musical event called "Musical Month" during the academic year 2020-21. Amid the challenges posed by the global pandemic, the club adapted creatively to the new normal and hosted a series of online musical performances and competitions, spreading joy and entertainment among the university community.

Talented students from various courses showcased their musical abilities by singing and playing instruments from the comfort of their homes. The performances were streamed live on the university's official social media platforms, allowing participants to receive appreciation and encouragement from their peers, faculties, and even family and friends worldwide.

Students from different departments and colleges within Invertis University participated in this event. The competition featured various categories such as solo singing, duets, and instrumental performances. Renowned musicians and faculty members served as esteemed judges, providing constructive feedback and selecting the winners.

As part of the Musical Month, Rock On organized online music workshops conducted by industry professionals. These workshops covered a wide range of topics, including vocal techniques, music composition, and instrument mastery. The interactive sessions allowed students to refine their musical skills and gain valuable insights from seasoned experts.

The event also facilitated virtual jam sessions, where music enthusiasts collaborated remotely to create melodious tunes. Participants connected via video conferencing platforms and shared their musical talents, resulting in beautiful collaborations that transcended physical boundaries.

In an emotional segment, the event paid homage to legendary musicians who have significantly contributed to the world of music. Participants paid their respects by performing renditions of classic songs, showcasing their reverence for these iconic figures.
