Article Title: An Overview of the Current State of Linked and Open Data in Cataloging.

The screenshot shows a web browser window with the address bar displaying the URL: `web.b.ebscohost.com/ehost/pdfviewer/pdfviewer?vid=7&sid=ca0e75db-ba08-44a6-9ded-9c7d83a2e72a%4...`. The browser's address bar also shows "Not secure". The page content includes a navigation bar with "Result List", "Refine Search", and "Download PDF" options. The main content area displays the title "An Overview of the Current State of Linked and Open Data in Cataloging" by Irfan Ullah, Shah Khusro, Asim Ullah, and Muhammad Naeem. The abstract text reads: "Linked Open Data (LOD) is a core Semantic Web technology that makes knowledge and information spaces of different knowledge domains manageable, reusable, shareable, exchangeable, and interoperable. The LOD approach achieves this through the provision of services for describing, indexing, organizing, and retrieving knowledge artifacts and making them available for quick consumption and publication. This is also aligned with the role and objective of traditional library cataloging. Owing to this link, major libraries of the world are transferring their bibliographic metadata to the LOD landscape. Some developments in this direction include the replacement of Anglo-American Cataloging Rules 2nd Edition by the Resource Description and Access (RDA) and the trend towards the wider adoption of BIBFRAME 2.0. An interesting and related development in this respect are the discussions among knowledge resources managers and library community on the possibility of enriching bibliographic metadata with socially curated or user-generated content. The popularity of Linked Open Data and its benefit to librarians and knowledge management professionals warrant a comprehensive survey of the subject. Although several reviews and survey articles on the application of Linked Data principles to cataloging have appeared in literature, a generic yet holistic review of the current state of Linked and Open Data in cataloging is missing. To fill the gap, the authors have collected recent literature (2014-18) on the current state of Linked Open Data in cataloging to identify research trends, challenges, and opportunities in this area and, in addition, to understand the potential of socially curated metadata in cataloging mainly in the realm of the Web of Data. To the best of the authors' knowledge, this review article is the first of its kind".

ALICE:

The screenshot shows a desktop environment with a blue background. A window titled "Alice" is open, displaying a "DOpen a library" button. A "Password Entry: Alice" dialog box is overlaid on the window, containing fields for "User ID" (with the value "DM") and "Password" (with a masked value "XXXX"). The taskbar at the bottom shows the Start button, several application icons, and the system tray with the time "2:45 PM" and date "7/31/2020".
