TIME-12:00-01:00pm

Place-Online Zoom Meeting App

Organizer-This Event was organized by Department of Professional Communication of Invertis University.

Speaker-Ms.Saniya Hansda

This session was organised for the B.Tech & MCA Final Year Student. Speaker discussed about The keys to effectively interviewing include preparation, energy, enthusiasm, and strategy. Taking the time to do company research, understanding where you fit within the organization, and having a clear idea of what you can contribute is time well-spent. Research and preparation will differentiate you from other candidates and may be the difference between landing your dream job and being passed over. When participating in an interview, adopt a consultant mentality and clearly communicate your ability to solve the unique challenges of the company with which you are interviewing. Be careful to not be either too positive or too negative about the company with which you're interviewing. Understanding what is already working, and having a clear idea of what you can help improve is a good mix of perspective and will position you as a thoughtful candidate rather than a phony flatterer or overly-negative critic. Ended with this, she covered whole perspectives of a best interview.

Emerging Trends in Skill Development

DATE-14.05.2020

TIME 10:00am

Place-Online Zoom App

Organizer-This Event was organized by Department of EE /ECE of Invertis University.

Speaker-Dr.Preeti (Skill Assistant Professor, Shri Skill Vishwakarma University, Haryana)

The Speaker focused on Various points-

- There have been three major challenges to skills development in India: expanding public sector collaboration with industry and the private sector, creating pathways for international mobility and addressing women's low participation in the labour force.
- Another market failure in skill development is externalities. For example, when a firm spends resources on developing the skills of an employee, he or she can quit and join another firm, thus benefitting the latter firm and not the firm that incurred the training cost.
- Collaboration with industry has been fundamental to ensure the relevance and quality of skills training and for building the institutional structures required to achieve the desired outcomes.
- India is committed to becoming the "skill capital" of the world and structured efforts such as the India International Skill Centre (IISC) programme are evidence of this. Technical collaborations have been undertaken with countries such as the UK, Australia and the UAE for benchmarking and mutual recognition of standards.
- Providing residential facilities for women trainees, embedding mentoring and coaching in skills programmes and providing social support through mechanisms such as local workshops have all been explored.
